

Robust Building Data: A Driver For Policy Development

The GBPN
February 2013

This report examines the quality of data available to analyse energy performance of buildings in China, the EU, India and the US. End-use data and data related to the typology of the building stock were compared and gaps and omissions were identified between and within regions. An expert panel reviewed data quality and recommended steps to create a sustainable data system.